

WELCOME NOTE

Welcome to this edition of Government Today, a publication dedicated to highlighting the work, progress and priorities shaping South Africa's public sector. This issue brings together key updates from national government, provinces, municipalities, state-owned entities, agencies and development partners, with a strong focus on how public-sector activity connects to business growth, community development and everyday service delivery.

Government is often viewed through policy announcements, budgets and official statements. Yet behind every plan is a practical story: a road being built, a water project being repaired, a small business being supported, a young person being trained, a municipality improving its systems or a community gaining access to better services. These are the stories that matter because they show how governance affects people, places and opportunity.

In this edition, we aim to present government information in a clear, accessible and useful way. Our goal is to help readers understand not only what is happening across the public sector, but why it matters. Whether you are a business owner, supplier, investor, public servant, community leader or citizen, this publication is designed to keep you informed and connected to the developments shaping South Africa.

As the country continues to focus on infrastructure, economic growth, service delivery and social impact, Government Today provides a platform for insight, visibility and constructive public-sector storytelling.
