WHY IT MATTERS

Stronger trade efficiency

Higher port and rail capacity improves export performance and global competitiveness.

Greater investor confidence

Reforms and partnerships create a stable environment for sustainable investment.

Stronger logistics network

Better rail, ports and corridors reduce congestion and lower the cost of doing business.

Better mobility and safety

Upgraded roads improve travel times, road safety and community access.

Economic growth

Reliable infrastructure unlocks jobs, supports industry and drives inclusive economic growth.

Dry Bulk Terminal and the Gauteng-to-eThekweni Container Corridor. In the Eastern Cape, Transnet has also signed a terminal operator agreement for a R22 billion gas facility project in the Coega Special Economic Zone. The project includes floating and permanent onshore infrastructure to supply gas to industry, data centres and independent power producers, with the potential to support around 3,500 MW of electricity generation. It is expected to create more than 500 jobs during construction and 50 permanent jobs once complete. Road infrastructure remains a national priority through SANRAL's ongoing project pipeline. The nearly R31 billion allocation to SANRAL supports upgrades, rehabilitation and new road sections, while also highlighting the growing pressure on national, provincial and municipal road maintenance systems.

These developments show that infrastructure is not only about construction. It is about movement, reliability, trade, safety, regional integration and confidence. Every port upgrade, road project, grid improvement and rail corridor reform strengthens the wider economy.
